“Did you hear the news, Mark?”

“Yes, Doctor. I listened to the radio three hours ago. They said it was going to snow. I remembered the snow when I was in Canada in November 2014 and went skiing two months later. I did not know how to ski and had an accident.”

“Nothing serious, I guess.”

“Not much.”

“What did you do in April?”

“I went to Santa Fe, in New Mexico.”

“When did you arrive here?”

“In August”

“What day is today?”

“It’s Monday, Doctor.”

“Wonderful! Did you sleep well?”

“Yes, I did. I ate a delicious chicken soup at 7 p.m. and went to bed at 10 p.m. I got up today at 8 a.m., had fried eggs for breakfast.”

“Did you take your medication?”

“Yes, I did, yesterday, at, at 9 pm.”

“Very well, Mark. You are making progress. Did you watch T.V.?”

“Yes, some 30 minutes. A reality show.”

“What time?”

“I can’t... Oh, yes. I noted it down. It’s here...at, at 4 p.m.”

“What did you have for lunch?”

“Um, um... it’s in my notebook...wait, please. Oh, pork and beans. Oh, no, that was on Saturday.”
